The order is a shot in the arm for the US planemaker and would help it narrow the gap with Airbus, which has over 80 per cent share in India's narrow-body fleet.

Airbus received an order for over 550 A320neo from IndiGo alone and its delivery pipeline for the narrow-body aircraft is full until 2024.

"India is one of the fastest-growing aviation markets in the world with unparalleled potential. Akasa Air's core purpose is to help power India's growth engine and democratise air travel by creating an inclusive environment for all Indians regardless of their socio-economic or cultural backgrounds," airline's Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Vinay Dube said.

The airline received no objection certificate from the civil aviation ministry last month.

"The 737 MAX, with its optimised performance, flexibility and capability, is the perfect airplane to establish Akasa Air in the Indian market and ensure it effectively grows its network," said Stan Deal, Boeing Commercial Airplanes president and CEO.

"Providing the lowest seat-mile costs for a single-aisle airplane as well as high dispatch reliability and an enhanced passenger experience, the 737 MAX will ensure Akasa Air has a competitive edge in its dynamic home market," said Boeing.

"Akasa Air's order for Boeing is very significant and gets them back in the narrow-body market in India. Post Covid-19 pandemic we see the OEMs focusing on stronger and long term players," said Kapil Kaul, South Asia CEO of aviation consultancy CAPA.

Bengaluru and Delhi. The order is a shot in the arm for the US planemaker and would help it narrow the gap with Airbus, which has over 80 per cent share in India's narrow-body fleet.

Airbus received an order for over 550 A320neo from IndiGo alone and its delivery pipeline for the narrow-body aircraft is full until 2024.

"India is one of the fastest-growing aviation markets in the world with unparalleled potential. Akasa Air's core purpose is to help power India's growth engine and democratise air travel by creating an inclusive environment for all Indians regardless of their socio-economic or cultural backgrounds," airline's Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Vinay Dube said.

The airline received no objection certificate from the civil aviation ministry last month. "The 737 MAX, with its optimised performance, flexibility and capability, is the perfect airplane to establish Akasa Air in the Indian market and ensure it effectively grows its network," said Stan Deal, Boeing Commercial Airplanes president and CEO.

"Providing the lowest seat-mile costs for a single-aisle airplane as well as high dispatch reliability and an enhanced passenger experience, the 737 MAX will ensure Akasa Air has a competitive edge in its dynamic home market," said Boeing. "Akasa Air's order for Boeing is very significant and gets them back in the narrow-body market in India. Post Covid-19 pandemic we see the OEMs focusing on stronger and long term players," said Kapil Kaul, South Asia CEO of aviation consultancy CAPA.

opportunity to go for a fund-raise? First, we didn't have any use for the cash. It's not that we have some planned capex for which we need cash. Number two, whether we like it or not, it's a dilution. Why on earth would you dilute your shareholding without a use case for the cash?

Bengaluru and Delhi. The order is a shot in the arm for the US planemaker and would help it narrow the gap with Airbus, which has over 80 per cent share in India's narrow-body fleet.

Airbus received an order for over 550 A320neo from IndiGo alone and its delivery pipeline for the narrow-body aircraft is full until 2024.

"India is one of the fastest-growing aviation markets in the world with unparalleled potential. Akasa Air's core purpose is to help power India's growth engine and democratise air travel by creating an inclusive environment for all Indians regardless of their socio-economic or cultural backgrounds," airline's Chief Executive Officer (CEO) Vinay Dube said.

The airline received no objection certificate from the civil aviation ministry last month.

"The 737 MAX, with its optimised performance, flexibility and capability, is the perfect airplane to establish Akasa Air in the Indian market and ensure it effectively grows its network," said Stan Deal, Boeing Commercial Airplanes president and CEO.

"Providing the lowest seat-mile costs for a single-aisle airplane as well as high dispatch reliability and an enhanced passenger experience, the 737 MAX will ensure Akasa Air has a competitive edge in its dynamic home market," said Boeing.

"Akasa Air's order for Boeing is very significant and gets them back in the narrow-body market in India. Post Covid-19 pandemic we see the OEMs focusing on stronger and long term players," said Kapil Kaul, South Asia CEO of aviation consultancy CAPA.

this crisis all things are getting back in balance.

Did the price cap mandated by the government play a role?

It certainly helped. But the price cap initially also hurt us because it was for a 30-day window and there were no takers for the higher fares. We wanted it down to 15 days,
